Bridgeport Downtown North Historic District

Description

Located in the northeastern quadrant of Bridgeport's historic downtown area, the Bridgeport Downtown North Historic District encompasses a total of approximately 20 acres of land, 51 properties, and 49 major structures. Better than 74% (38) of these major structures remain substantially intact examples of commercial and municipal architecture dating from the 1860s through the 1930s and contribute to the architectural and/or historical significance of the district.

The district's southern boundary is visually defined by a virtually immediate transition which takes place between the historic architecture located within the district and the modern commercial and municipal construction which dominates most of the center of Bridgeport's downtown along the Fairfield-Avenue corridor. The western and northern boundaries are defined by a mixture of adjacent modern commercial construction and large, grade-level parking lots. The district's eastern boundary, which was drawn to exclude non-contributing properties along the western side of Water Street, reflects the existence of an elevated railroad trackbed which extends along the length of the eastern side of Water Street. This raised trackbed forms a highly prominent visual and physical barrier between structures located in the district and those located to its east.

Building heights in the district generally range between 2 and 13 stories. Brick, cut stone, cast stone, and reinforced concrete form the principal materials utilized in the construction of district buildings. However, the area also includes a handful of wood-frame buildings, as well as several buildings incorporating pressed-metal entablature fabric, cast-iron storefront fabric, and/or exterior details executed in terra cotta. With the exception of a few structures, such as the Fairfield County Courthouse at 172-92 Golden Hill Street and the Lorraine Hotel at 78 Chapel Street, most district buildings are sited very close to the street and each other, often forming virtually unbroken and, at times, imposing streetscapes.

Popular 19th- and early 20th-century architectural styles represented in the district range from relatively modest to more elaborate and, in several cases, high-style examples of the Italianate, Richardsonian Romanesque, late Gothic Revival, Colonial Revival, Neoclassical, and Art Deco modes. In terms of architectural integrity, the exteriors of most district buildings retain the bulk of their significant, historic, architectural features, and are in relatively good condition. For the most part, significant exterior alterations to buildings are limited to storefront, signage, and, in some cases, window fabric. Only a half-dozen of the buildings in the district erected prior to 1937 have experienced unsympathetic, non-historic exterior modifications to the point where they no longer can be considered as contributing to the significance of the area.

The district encompasses a number of buildings which stand as individually distinctive examples of their type, style and/or period, many of which are known to have been designed by prominent architects of their respective eras. Examples of such structures include the Richardsonian Romanesque-style 1900 Bridgeport Boys Club at 227-41 Middle Street (photograph 20), the Italianate-style 1871/72 Newfield Building at 1180-88 Main Street (photograph 23), the monumentally scaled Art Deco-style 1934 U.S. Post Office at 140 Middle Street (photograph 24), and the Italianate-style 1872 Winghoffer Building at 79-81 Gold Street, which was the first building erected in Bridgeport to incorporate a full-front elevation wall of cast stone (photograph 21). Among the foremost of such structures are the only two district buildings to have been listed on the National Register prior to 1986 -- the Warren Briggs-designed Richardsonian Romanesque-style 1888 Fairfield County Courthouse at 172-192 Golden Hill Street; and the Art Deco-style Hotel Beach at 140 Fairfield Avenue, built in 1927/28 according to a design by Thomas, Martin, and Kirkpatrick (photograph 16).

An inventory of buildings and properties located within the Bridgeport Downtown North Historic District is provided on the ensuing pages in the following format:

Bridgeport Downtown North Historic District

Significance

(Criterion C)

The district is significant because it encompasses one of two large groupings of structures which effectively illustrate the emergence of downtown Bridgeport as the commercial, financial, cultural, and social heart of one of Connecticut's foremost early 20th-century urban-industrial and regional-government centers. For example, the area's continuing expansion as an important regional center between the end of the Civil War and the early 20th-century is clearly marked by the progression of historic architectural styles exhibited by its various buildings. Structures such as the Italianate-style Newfield Building (1871/21) at 1180-88 Main Street (photographs 21 and 23), the Italian-ate/Queen Anne-style Winton Building (1885/86) at 245-62 Middle Street (photograph 22), the Richardsonian Romanesque-style Bridgeport Boys Club (1900) at 227-41 Middle Street (photograph 20), the Colonial Revival-style F.B. Curtis Building (1928) at 1155-59 Main Street (photograph 18), and the Art Deco-style U.S. Post Office (1934) at 140 Middle Street combine to provide a coherent, graphic record of the pre-World War II evolution of the district. Several individual district buildings also reflect key aspects of downtown Bridgeport's development prior to the onset of World War II. For example, downtown Bridgeport's highly important role as the seat of Fairfield County remains clearly marked by the massive grandeur of the Richardsonian Romanesque-style Fairfield County Courthouse (1888) at 172-92 Golden Hill Street.

The district is also significant because it encompasses a large number of substantially intact buildings which chart the development of a variety of popular 19th- and early 20th-century urban architectural styles, including the Italianate, Queen Anne, Richardsonian Romanesque, late Gothic Revival, Colonial Revival, Georgian Revival, Neoclassical, and Art Deco modes (photographs 16-25). A number of these buildings rank as particularly good and, in some cases, outstanding individual examples of several of these styles. For example, the 1871/72 Newfield Building at 1180-88 Main Street is a fine example of a relatively large brick and cut-stone commercial structure executed in the late Italianate-style (photograph 23). blown versions of the early and late Richardsonian Romanesque-style are represented respectively by the 1888 Fairfield County Courthouse at 172-92 Golden Hill Street, and by the 1900 Bridgeport Boys Club at 227-41 Middle Street (photograph 20). Two outstanding examples of the Art-Deco style are the 1927/28 Hotel Barnum at 140 Fairfield Avenue (photograph 16) and the 1934 U.S. Post Office at 140 Middle Street (photograph 24). While in need of extensive rehabilitation, the 1872 Italianate style Winghoffer Building at 70-81 Gold Street holds a unique place in Bridgeport's building history; it was the first structure in the city to incorporate a front elevation faced completely in cast stone (photograph 21).

Finally, the district is architecturally significant because a number of its buildings stand as important examples of the work of late 19th- and/or early 20th-century architects. Foremost among these structures are the Warren Briggs-designed 1888 Fairfield County Courthouse at 172-92 Golden Hill Street and 1900 Bridgeport Boys Club at 227-41 Middle Street (photograph 20); the Hotel Barnum at 140 Fairfield Avenue, which was designed by the firm Thomas, Martin, and Kirkpatrick (photograph 16); and Charles Wellington Walker's 1934 U.S. Post Office at 140 Middle Street (photograph 24).

Bridgeport Downtown North Historic District - Boundary Justification

The boundaries of the Bridgeport Downtown North Historic District were delineated on the basis of the following four general criteria:

- a) The thematic unity of the district as a congregation of substantially intact structures originally designed for commercial and municipal uses which strongly reflects the development of the northern half of Bridgeport's central business district over the course of the 19th and early 20th centuries.
- b) Current physical characteristics of the district which visually distinguish the area within Bridgeport's central business district as a whole, including the historic architectural integrity of individual structures and extant sight lines.
- c) The exclusion of properties which do not contribute to the historical or architectural integrity of the district, wherever such exclusions were reasonable and practical.
- d) Conformance with the general National Park Service guideline that structures proposed for listing on the National Register as contributing to the historic or architectural significance of an historic district be a minimum of 50 years old.
